

CCTSI Communications Resources

TRAINING

Communicating Your Science to the Public

Getting the Word Out

Storytelling

Press Release – talk to a communicator

Work with media relations on your campus to pitch the story to the media

Make use of CU newsrooms

Share the news:

CU Campus newsletters

Department/Division newsletters

CU Connections

User Generated Content

Do you have an academic insight on current affairs or trends? Write a piece for the Conversation – work with your communicator...

Blogs

Podcasts

Videos (of your one-minute elevator speech)

fome > News > iHeard Colorado Will Collaborate With Communities to Provide Accurate Health Information

iHeard Colorado Will Collaborate With Communities to Provide Accurate Health Information

New initiative prepares and distributes accurate health information to counter false claims

Written by Wendy Meyer on June 20, 2

Have you heard about a horse tranquilizer that rots flesh? A fungus that spreads between people? How do you know what is true? Should you to concerned or take any action?

Getting the Word Out

Social Media

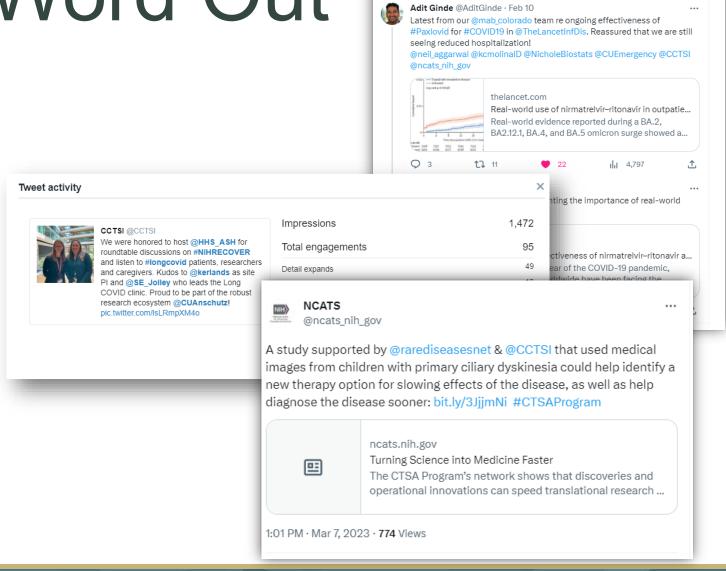

Talk to @CCTSI about sharing the news of your study on LinkedIn or Twitter

Create your own posts and ask partners to amplify

Start building a community online around your discipline/colleagues/academic interest

Tag important and relevant contacts

Amplify the work of others, especially those in your community

Adit Ginde

Following